PROFILE

Megan practices in inquests, royal commissions and public inquiries, regulatory prosecutions and damages proceedings. She has a particular interest in medical and legal professional obligations and public administration.

Since joining the bar Megan has appeared alone and as junior counsel in disciplinary prosecutions and negligence actions relating to health practitioners and legal professionals; inquests and public inquiries acting for bereaved family members, public interest groups and health practitioners; and personal injury actions arising out of medical, industrial and motor vehicle incidents. Along with appearance work, Megan has a strong practice in drafting and advice work.

Prior to coming to the Bar, Megan practised as a solicitor in the insurance litigation department of Lander & Rogers, primarily in professional negligence and personal injuries.

Megan holds a Graduate Diploma of Health and Medical Law from the University of Melbourne.
