PROFILE

Debra practises across a range of administrative, regulatory and common law areas, focussing on the interplay between government agency actions and their impact on the individual. She has extensive experience in representing government agencies and her focus is on assisting people to deal with government successfully.

Debra has acted and advised in a large variety of cases, including judicial reviews of agency decisions, personal injury claims, sentencing, emergency management day and bail applications, as well as prosecutions by Community Correctional Services. She has significant experience in freedom of information matters, discrimination claims, and managing subpoena requests.

She practises in health adjacent matters, including inquests, powers of attorney, guardianship, and matters intersecting crime and health such as reviews under the Crimes (Mental Impairment and Unfitness to be Tried) Act and supervision orders pursuant to the Serious Offenders Act.

Debra most recently worked in house at and for Corrections Victoria and other Victorian Government agencies, and regularly appeared on urgent Corrections Victoria applications. Some of her cases included:

- Mercorella v The Secretary to the Department of Justice [2015] VSC 18 (4 February 2015),
- Rich v Ryan [2015] VSC 785 (4 December 2015),
